

flat surface and the soil of the fertile river beds of agriculture and the climate suitable for planting most of the agricultural crops and raising the various animals and the abundance of water resources represented by rivers Euphrates and Gharaf and their branches as well as marshes. In the development of agriculture and industry in the rural judiciary and improve the economic level in general if invested in a developmental development scheme, and the study showed that the rural judiciary has great human potential, especially within the working groups and these vary in The study showed that the countryside of the judiciary has a lot of economic potential represented by agriculture branches (plant production, animal) despite the low areas and productivity of all agricultural crops as well as the small number of animals, and is located in the region The study shows some simple rural handicrafts that provide a simple income for their owners. The countryside of the judiciary also enjoys great tourist potential represented by archeological, religious and natural areas. The study showed that the development indicators and infrastructure services in rural areas The study also revealed that there are several villages that are candidates for development in order to be development centers and modern villages that contribute to the development of neighboring villages and provide services to them. The results were accompanied by a number of recommendations The study also concluded with a list of references, sources and list of annexes.